204 San Antonio St. Marr, Phone $550, EVERYBODY'S COOK BOOK

MONG entrees nothing is more popular, or more frequently served, than Scrambled Brains, which constitutes the plat de jour, not only at many family tables, but also forms the piece de resistance at banquet boards. This sustaining viand, of which a little goes a long way, is equally good whether made of the desiccated intelligence of a college boy or girl, or an old club hen, or of a male creature, commonly known as a highbrow. The brains f each of these yields such perfect results that bon vivants have never been able to determine which makes the most complete and perfect scramble.

The most familiar form of Scrambled Brains, and that which forms the basis of family diet in most households, is Scrambled Calf Brain. To make this dish select a nice, bright son or daughter, and send him or her off to college. Let him, or her, sonk for four years in a tepid mixture of biology, and sociology, and damicology, until all of the hard, horse sense with which he, or she, started and damicology, until all of the mark, horse sense with which he, or she, started out has become soft and flabby, and begun to disintegrate.

Then stir in a smattering of ancient and modern languages, a pinch of mathematics, but not enough to enable him or her to tell what a peck and a half of petatoes would some to at $2 a bushel; add a ton of undigested theories about religion and polities, and flavor with an unlimited amount of contempt for the opinion of older people, and especially parents, and a scorn of people who are so important that they merely work for money. Serve this dish up garnished with large slices of tongue, and flowers of spech, with an outer border of frills of language.

This dish is so expensive that it makes the feast of Luculius look like a dairy lunch, as it costs anywhere from five to twenty thousand dollars to scramble a single girl's or boy's brains. Undoubtedly the high cost of living is due to the insatiable appetite that most families have for this delicacy, and it is a heart-rending sight to observe an old father or mother, who have almost starved themselves in order to procure this delicacy, sitting up feasting on Serambled College Calf Brains. Other people, however, do not care particularly for it, and when it is set before them as a treat they seldom ask for more. Another form of Scrambled Brains that is found only too often on the menu to suit most tastes is Scrambled Brains a la Club Hen. To prepare this select a middle-aged female whose gray matter has been exclusively occupied with butchers' bills, and grocers' bills, and the servant question, and the croup, and the measles, and getting husband off to work, and the children off to school and the spring cleaning done on time. Lop off these topics of thought and plunge her into the midst of a Browning circle. Chop up her intellect into small pieces by means of courses of lectures on Ancient Byzantine Art, the Drama of the Ptolemies, the Inner Meaning of Rernard Shaw, with side lines on the philosophy of Sudermann, and the Humor of Ibsen, and an Investigation into the Whatness of the Ain't.

When by this process you have reduced a normally good mind into mince eat, stir in a scant cupful of encyclopedia information, and scramble over the club fire for 30 minutes. Scrambled Heu's Brains should always be served with a sauce of culturine. This is made of an equal part of club papers and alleged literary talk, and it is always highly favored with a superior attitude toward a mere husband, who does nothing but work to pay the bills. Sometimes a long-haized poet, or a musician, or a soulful author, or some other kind of an affinity, who speaks as one free soul to another, is served on the side with Scrambled Club Hen's Brains, but this is not necessary, as the dish has a flavor all its own without any additional seasoning.

Scrambled Club Hen's Brains may be said to be almost the national dish of America. It is a particular favorite with women, though for some unknown reason men do not seem to relish it.

Scrambled Highbrow Brains is a common dish at many public functions, especially at women's club banquets. The dish is very easily prepared, Take an individual, by preference one who is so impractical that he cannot make a living, but who has no hesitation in telling how the universe should be run, stuff up with large, resounding words that are unintelligible to the audience and let him talk. Flavor this mixture with sugenies, and sextology, and remarks about things decent people don't talk about in public; spice it up with gibberish about technique, and coloratura and feeling in art; add a few barrels of knocks for everything that is simple and compre with a garnish of dirty linen, and mussed clothes, and alfalfa whiskers, and you have a tidbit that many people roll under their tongues.

Scrambled Highbrow Brains are, however, highly indigestible, and disagree

Is Firm, Volume of Business Is Small.

Note-Questations reflect closing sales Thursday, Feb. 12.

New York. Feb. 18.—A strong underione characterized the meruling trading but the volume of business was small and advances did not reach striking proportions.

Assurances from Washington that the zuitroad freight rate case would be decided before the summer bolidays, put the railroad shares on a stronger basis. Short covering and a mederate amount of outside buying operated in favor of higher prices. Movements were limited to fractions in most cases, although some of the specialities made more extended advances.

Bonds were steady.
Foreign appraisors took advantage of the improvement in the market to sell about 5000 shares.

FINDING OF BONES

REVEALS MURDER That the bones of a human being found in an adobe shack near Seventh mute evidence of a murder committed some years ago, is the opinion of coro-ner James J. Murphy, who made a minute examination of the bones. Investigations made by coroner Mur-phy disclosed that the house in which house four years, stated that he pur-chased it from Julian Zuniga. Zuniga was shot and killed about a month ago in Juarez. He is said to have owned the place a number of years.

Though Market Undertone Kansas Reports of Threatened Freeze, After Thaw, Steady the Market.

Chicago, III. Fab. 12.—Declining prices at Liverpool had a hearish effect today on the wheat market here, although the weakness abroad was due largely to flattering reports from this side regarding the condition of the winter crop.

Kansus dispatches telling of danger from a freeze after a thaw acted as a steadying lollucate. Prices started a shade to be lower and then rallied, but afterward fell again.

In corn the majority of traders were inthe close was easy at a shade lower to a like amount up, compared with last night crined to press the selling side. Attention centered a good deal on the lightness of supping demand. The market, which opened a 18th to 4c down, reacted a little, though not in a lasting manner.

The close, however, was unchanged. It is it under lost night.

Outs cased off with other grain. What support there was came only after a decidine.

Heaviness due to a retouck of prices at Heaviness due to a setback of prices at e rards formed the rale in previsions, se market averages from a shade to 5c
